

A 10x10 grid heatmap visualization. The grid is composed of 100 cells. The color scale ranges from light gray (low density) to dark gray (high density). The highest density is concentrated in the upper-middle section, specifically in the top 4 rows and columns 5 through 7. The density decreases as it moves away from this central cluster, with the bottom two rows showing the lowest density (lightest gray).

